Grants

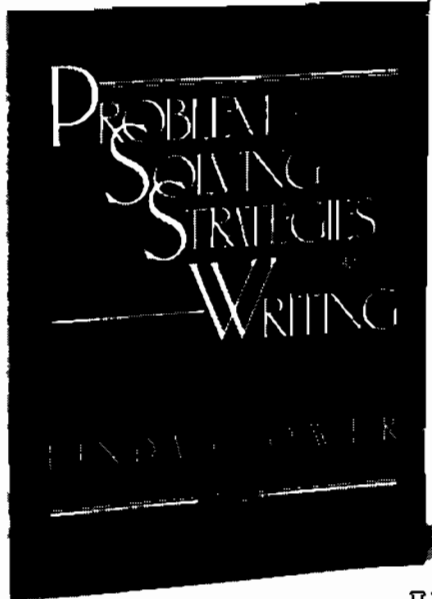

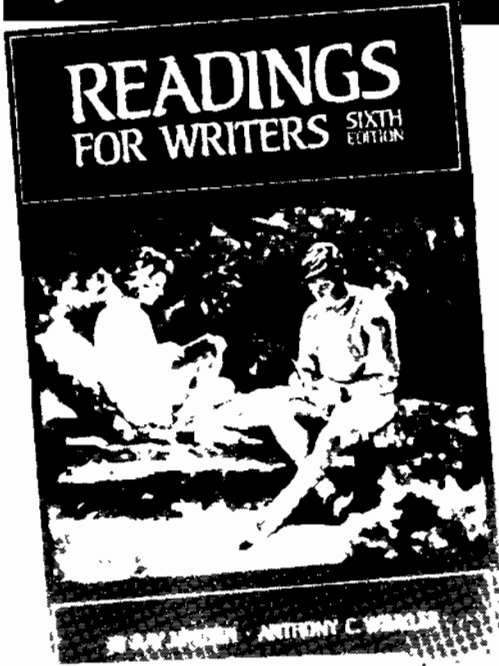

The Council of Writing Program Administrators hopes to award a few small grants (under $300) for research related specifically to the concerns of writing program administration. Proposals should not exceed three single-spaced pages and should describe the problem to be addressed, the methods and procedures for conducting the research, a time-line for the project, and a budget. Those wishing to conduct surveys may include in their proposal the free use of the WPA mailing list. WPA's awarded grants will be asked to have their work considered for publication first by the Council's journal WPA: Writing Program Administration. Two copies of the proposal should be addressed to the President of WPA* and should be postmarked no later than November 15th. Awards will be made annually as funds allow.

St. Martin's Press Takes Great Pride in Announcing a Major
Publishing Event—

The St. Martin's Handbook

by ANDREA LUNSFORD, Ohio State University and ROBERT CONNORS, University of New Hampshire

St. Martin's Press is indeed proud to be the publishers of this Handbook, and we are convinced it will quickly establish itself as the Handbook for students of the '90s—and beyond. Why?

- because it is the first Handbook in fifty years to be based on extensive nationwide research (a survey of more than 20,000 papers) in the error patterns typical of today's student writers
- because it provides complete—and fully accessible—coverage of the writing process, presenting the material in a form to be used rather than merely read
- because it is thoroughly grounded in contemporary theories of rhetoric and learning
- because it will challenge your students to move beyond correct prose toward compelling prose
- because it will be accompanied by the most useful and up-to-date ancillary package possible
- because it is the joint effort of two of the most highly regarded composition specialists at work in the field today

The St. Martin's Handbook is ready now for your examination. To receive your copy of the Annotated Instructor's Edition — along with an extensive sampler containing representative sample materials from all the components in the ancillary package—call us now at our toll-free number, 800-221-7945, Ext. 554; or write us on your college letterhead specifying your course title, present text, and approximate enrollment. Developing College Writing
FROM SUBSTANCE TO STYLEHELEN HEIGHTSMAN GORDON,
Bakersfield College

A comprehensive rhetoric—with handbook—for basic writing and freshman composition, Developing College Writing provides full treatment of the writing process, paragraphs, and essays, and also covers critical thinking and such specialized writing tasks as competency tests, essay exams, business letters and résumés. Each chapter comprises instruction on composition (with exercises); instruction on style (with exercises); and writing assignments requiring students to apply concepts taught in each chapter. A complete handbook section—with exercises and answers—is also included.

Instructor's Manual—and Instructor's Edition (with manual)—availableWork in Progress
A GUIDE TO WRITING AND REVISING

LISA EDE, Oregon State University

This authoritative rhetoric for freshman composition courses offers a practical approach to writing and writing instruction. Rather than give students rules or ask them to imitate models, it helps students learn to analyze rhetorical situations in order to take charge of their writing. Providing a variety of examples—including complete papers and actual works in progress—the book fully integrates rhetorical skills with exercises within chapters and at chapter ends, making it possible for students to practice not only writing but reading, speaking, and listening skills.

Patterns for College Writing
A RHETORICAL READER AND GUIDE

Fourth Edition

LAURIE G. KIRSZNER, Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science
STEPHEN R. MANDELL, Drexel University

Patterns for College Writing offers a highly practical approach to preparing students for writing assignments in various academic courses. The introductory chapter provides detailed discussions of the writing process and rhetorical patterns, illustrating it with successive annotated drafts of a student essay. Following are nine chapters, each devoted to a different rhetorical pattern. New to this Fourth Edition are eighteen of the professional essays and six of the student writer selections, as well as the "thematic connections" following each essay and the end-of-text glossary.

Instructor's Manual—and Instructor's Edition (with manual)—availableMeeting Your Composition
Needs More Effectively
Than Ever!*The Practice of Writing

Third Edition

ROBERT SCHOLLES, Brown University
NANCY R. COMLEY, Queens College, CUNY

The Practice of Writing is a combination rhetoric and reader that emphasizes learning by doing. Text discussion is brief but useful, with space devoted instead to writing practice—85 reading sections and 55 practice sections. For this Third Edition, several chapters have been streamlined to strengthen the academic focus; the narration chapter has been completely revised and is now tied directly to the description chapter; and an exciting new section in the synthesis chapter includes criticism, interviews, and 20 photographs.

Publication: January 1989

Instructor's Manual—and Instructor's Edition (with manual)—availableRepresenting Reality
READINGS IN LITERARY NONFICTION

JOHN WARNOCK, University of Wyoming

Representing Reality is designed to introduce students—both as readers and as writers—to the richness and variety of nonfiction prose. Chapters include passages by the very finest practitioners of nonfiction prose—among them, Mark Twain, Henry David Thoreau, and Joan Didion—touching on topics and issues that will engage both instructors and students. The enlightening introductions serve to acquaint students with the book's approach to literary nonfiction and familiarize them with the development and history of each genre.

Publication: January 1989

Instructor's Manual availableRethinking Writing

PESHE C. KURILOFF, University of Pennsylvania

A clear, concise rhetoric especially designed for advanced writing courses, Rethinking Writing builds on skills and concepts students acquired during freshman composition. It reflects the most current knowledge about writing strategies, providing students with the principles and perspectives they need in order to respond effectively to various academic and professional writing situations. All text discussions are oriented toward academic writing and all examples are of academic writing, with a broad range of fields represented throughout.

RESOURCES FOR WRITERS: NEW ENGLISH TITLES FROM D. C. HEATH

WRITING WITH CONFIDENCE:

A Modern College Rhetoric

James W. Kirkland,
Collett B. Dilworth, Jr., Patrick Bizzaro,
all of East Carolina University
1989 Paper 312 pages
Instructor's Edition (Text and
Instructor's Guide bound in one volume)

Combining the essential elements of a reader, a rhetoric, and a handbook, Writing With Confidence helps students understand the three intellectual roles of the writer as observer, reader, and thinker. Written in a clear and direct style, the text provides comprehensive coverage of the writing process, offers a helpful analysis of the relationship between purpose and technique, and encourages practice through the writing of multi-draft essays.

WRITING:

Processes and Intentions

Richard C. Gebhardt, Findlay College
Dawn Rodrigues,
Colorado State University
1989 Paper 304 pages
Instructor's Edition (Text and
Instructor's Guide bound in one volume)

Writing is a brief, down-to-earth rhetoric that guides students from critical thinking about writing to formal writing tasks. Experts in the fields of composition and computer writing, the authors show students how to adjust their writing processes to the demands of the task at hand.

VIEWPOINTS: Readings Worth Thinking and Writing About

W. Royce Adams,
Santa Barbara City College
1989 Paper 400 pages est.
Instructor's Edition (Text and
Instructor's Guide bound in one volume)

High interest readings and intensive development of writing skills bring the reading/writing connection together for basic writing students. Emphasis throughout the text is on evaluating the author's purpose, tone, and thesis and applying critical thinking skills to the reading and writing process.

THE COMPLETE SENTENCE WORKOUT BOOK

Second Edition

Carolyn H. Fitzpatrick, University of Maryland
— Baltimore County
Marybeth B. Ruscica, St. Vincent's College of
St. John's University
1989 Paper 404 pages

A confidence-building developmental organization and self-instructional format helps students master the basics of English grammar and punctuation. Students begin with the core of the sentence—the verb—and progress to the sentence, paragraph, and essay level, practicing and applying what they learn.

THE COMPLETE PARAGRAPH WORKOUT BOOK

Carolyn H. Fitzpatrick, University of Maryland
— Baltimore County
Marybeth B. Ruscica, St. Vincent's College of
St. John's University
1989 Paper 400 pages est.

This developmental worktext is specifically suited to those instructors who want a process-oriented approach to writing as well as a strong review of sentence-level fundamentals.

A CREATIVE COPYBOOK

Leo Rockas, University of Hartford
1989 Paper 278 pages

Each of 33 lessons in this controlled composition workbook focuses on a particular grammatical or rhetorical topic, developed around a short reading. Directed imitation and creative manipulation of these selections teach students to apply their understanding of grammar and mechanics to their own drafts.
